

ANUSA Indigenous Wellbeing Program

The ANUSA Indigenous Wellbeing Program is designed to support enrolled Indigenous students facing financial hardship during their studies at the ANU.

If awarded, this financial contribution will not have to be paid back. A maximum total of up to $300 can be granted per student per semester at the discretion of ANUSA towards wellbeing, health and fitness related services. Application is open until funds are exhausted. While this program priorities mental health support, the funds from this program is able to go towards other wider wellbeing programs

Examples of what can be covered:

- Physical and mental health support and related costs such as appointment gap fees.
- Fitness membership (up to the program limit of $300 per student, if successful), club sign-up fees.
- Fitness related costs such as necessary equipment.

Aims:

- To provide financial support to promote Indigenous students' overall wellbeing while studying at ANU.
- To support Indigenous students in meeting the costs of physical and mental health programs and fitness and skill up activities.
- This grant will not be provided for the following costs/reasons:
